

BOOK: CUBE CHIC

Pimp My Cubicle

Walk the red carpet, relax in your cabin, or take a drive through New York City, all while you are in your cube. With the help of Kelley L. Moore's creative vision in CUBECHIC (Quirk Publishing, $15.95), you can amp up your drab workspace. Who said your cube was only to be gray?

This how-to book gives step-by-step instructions for transforming your workstation. Let your inner-rocker out with a display of your tie-dye shirts, lambskin rug, and favorite '70s-band album covers. —YA

DESIGN: BOON

Little Consumers Clean Up

Kids are likely to wear as many calories as they consume. But it doesn't have to be that way. Children's product designer Boon has once again come to the rescue of parents with an eye for good, sensible design. In the case of the Catch Bowl and the Snack Ball (two of the seven products in Boon's new feeding line), their philosophy can be summed up in one word: containment. The Catch Bowl, with its soft, extended rim, funnels runaway grub right back into the bowl. And for families on the go, the Snack Ball is a must-have. Unlike plastic bags, it protects fragile snacks (such as cereal) from being crushed. It also unscrews for easy cleaning. Both products cost less than $7. —PW
